

Dr Caroline Simpson is a friendly, empathetic and thorough doctor. She completed her Medical Degree at the University of Auckland in New Zealand and she is a fellow of the Royal Australian College of General Practitioners. She completed her GP specialist training in Melbourne through Eastern Victoria GP training. Prior to studying medicine Caroline completed a Bachelor of Physical Education and subsequently worked as a trainer in a gym. She maintains an interest in improving health through physical activity. Although she enjoys all areas of General Practice, her special interests include Paediatrics, Teen health and Women's Health. Outside of medicine she enjoys hanging out with her dog and spending time in the outdoors.
